I am always moved by how much people are touched by stories from their past. Hearing the stories of people who almost lost their homes gives us some perspective as to how much the world can change in just a year. As the winds of change threaten to overtake us all, this autumn finds us surrounded by world-changing events. I am particularly moved by the stories of courage and inspiration. I chose these seven stories of people who are sacrificing for the greater good. T] Wylie founded the Free The Children Foundation in 1999. He is a visionary with a rock-solid moral compass. I am inspired to do better by the very real possibility of a better, cleaner, safer world for my children. Cheryl Chan is an Educationist-in-Residence with Free The Children. She passionately fights to protect the rights and dignity of girls in Afghanistan. Her years of expertise and commitment in Afghanistan is rooted in the deep love for her country and her sisters and brothers who are so desperately in need of her services. The studies of biochemical and genetic bases of B12-deficiency reveal the fundamental role of parietal cells in the absorption of vitamin B12, its transport through the enterohepatic circulation, and its liberation of biologically active coenzyme forms. B12 absorption is not a tissue-specific process and occurs in conjunction with the proper interaction of other factors, such as active
